

THE BATTLE OF SPOTSYLVANIA.

Carlisle's Account of the Fight.

(From the Boston Journal, 15.)

TUESDAY'S OPERATIONS.

It became evident on Tuesday morning that Gen. Lee had chosen Spotsylvania as a place for trial of strength. Preparations were accordingly made for the work. The great drawback to Gen. Grant was his wounded. He decided to send them back to Fredericksburg. All who could walk, were started on foot. Those who could not walk, but who did not need ambulances, were placed in empty wagons. The long, sad procession departed, or rather began to depart, to make room for the other thousands soon to take their places in the hospitals. It was a sad sight. It made me sick and weary of war, and yet a truer view is that which looks at the sin and iniquity which causes all this suffering, pain and sorrow. Trains of supplies not immediately needed were sent to the rear, and ammunition trains were ordered up.

At daybreak the cannonade commenced, our batteries coming first into play. The batteries attached to the 2d corps, Hart farm and on the Piney Church road were very active. The rebel batteries at first treated the demonstration with silent indifference, but as continual tearing rousers a wild hoast from slumber, so at length they replied. The air was calm and the reboilation rolled far away over the forests. There was no movement of troops to the front, but there was change of position all along the line. Brigades which had been in the front the day before were placed in the second line, and those who had a little respite from fighting were thrown to the front. General Grant rode along the lines, and made an inspection of the situation, and issued orders for a general attack at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. At noon our batteries slackened fire, but the rebels now took the initiative.

SPOTSYLVANIA.

The place is old, cooly, ruined long ago like every other southern town. It was once a center—a place for trade, political meetings and the like. The Catharpen road runs along Catharpen creek toward Orange Court House; the road to Fredericksburg is the most traveled of all—the others are mere country roads with little travel in the best of times. As has already been said, the country is undulating, half wilderness and half cleared land. The roads meet on elevated ground, commanding the valley of the Po river.

There is nothing at Spotsylvania worthy of contention—no mountain pass or deep running river—but Gen. Grant is on his way to Richmond. Lee has determined to oppose him at every step. Like Apollyon in Bunyan's Pilgrim, the adversary has come out to meet him on the spot.

Lee has the advantage of position, and is able to come to trite his forces.

THE BATTLE.

It was about 1 o'clock when Longstreet began to press Hancock. Birney, on the extreme right was first engaged. It was a hot fire, lasting half an hour, but he held his ground. The artillery which had been silent a little while, now commenced their uproar, and at 2 o'clock it was a continuous discharge of field pieces. The 20th Massachusetts were thrown out as skirmishers on the right, and performed their part without flinching.

Having made no impression on Birney's division, the attack was abandoned there; the rebels tried to pry open the joints between the 2d and 5th corps, but Hancock deflected a portion of Gibbon's command towards the west, while Warren brought up a brigade towards the right, and thus the joint was made exceedingly strong. It had been weakened by advancing Barlow's division across there. The rebel columns came in mass. After a little skirmishing, Hancock withdrew Barlow and made his corps more compact. The withdrawal of Barlow was a sign to faint-hearted ones that the day was going against us.

During the lull in the strife I rode back to the 2d corps hospitals to see the wounded.

"How goes it, boys?" was the question.

"All right," said one.

"Pretty rough," said another.

"They will never get through the 2d corps," said a Librarian.

The lull had become a storm. How fearfully rolled the musketry. It is utterly useless to attempt description or comparison. It was volley after volley, surge after surge, roll after roll.

Maurice Collins, of the 12th Massachusetts, was brought in with an ugly wound through the shoulder. He was a catholic, the priest was showing him the crucifix: "Will it be mortal?" he asked.

"Perhaps not if you lie still and keep quiet; but you may have to lose your arm."

"Well, I am willing to give an arm to my country," was the reply of one who, though born in the over green isle, while loving the harp and shamrock, adores the Stars and stripes of his adopted country. Leaving the hospital, and galloping towards the front, I met hundreds of men working their way to the rear—an unmistakable sign that there is hot work in front, and that there is some doubt as to what will be the result. The contest went on with but little cessation on the right, and gradually extended toward the left; but the main attack of the rebels was on the Second Corps, which stood like a wall of adamant.

The attack of Longstreet upon the Second Corps at Gettysburg had more of desperation in it than this, but that was an action of fifteen minutes, while this was one of hours—hours of hard, persistent fighting of a sanguinary character.

The attack of Longstreet upon the Gettysburg army failed. Gen. Sumner and credit is due to the Second Corps. It may be said that the 2d corps was not the best of the army, and its commander has proved himself to be one of the ablest Generals of the war.

It would be unfair, however, to give all credit to the Second Corps; the 5th and a portion of the 6th were engaged in this struggle.

This is a true description and incomplete. It would require many pages if I were to give a narrative of the action of regiments—so vast is the army. And how futile all attempts at description. Even now, I seem to hear, although miles from the scene of strife, the constant rattle and roll of musketry; the cannonade; the deep reverberations; the cheers; the shouts; the tramping of horses; the rumbling of artillery; the sharp ringing of the musket shot; the explosion of shells, and the loud whizzing of the fragments. It goes on hour after hour. The end and train of men with stretchers bearing away the wounded increases its numbers. The ranks are thinning out, but yet the true and faithful ones face without flinching the deadly storm. They stand firm as a rock for their country. O, you who read these lines of your happy homes, know but little of war! You cannot comprehend till you have stood in the ranks, or at least till you have been a near observer, how much you owe to the brave men who for six consecutive days have stood upon the battle-field fighting for your liberty. You cannot think them enough; you cannot do too much for them. The undiminished heroism of the 2d Corps on Tuesday last will be forever memorable in history.

While this force contest was going on, a body of rebels marauded out on the Catharpen road, and came down upon the rear of the 2d corps, probably not to attack the troops, but to cut out the trains which were packed in the rear. Gen. Grant's and Gen. Meade's headquarters were on the Piney Grove road. A signal officer who had been stationed on the right flank came in upon the gallop, evidently much excited. "You must pack up quick!" he shouted. Preparations had already been made for a removal of headquarters nearer to the center, and in a few moments the trains were in motion. Orders were sent to the rear to be ready for any emergency. Two or three batteries went out and took position, but that was all that came of the movement. The rebels gained nothing for their trouble.

Orders had been issued for the advance of the 9th corps promptly at five o'clock, but the exceeding fierceness of the struggle on the right, the necessity of sending divisions of the 6th to sustain the 2d, delayed the advance. It was half past six before the 9th began its movement on the enemy.

The 9th and 5th moved at the same time. What a grand movement it was! A line four miles long; not a continuous line, but brigade after brigade of men—dark masses, now in open field, now lost to sight in the forest; now emerging into view and opening fire upon the foe. The movement was like the swinging of a huge folding door, the pivot hinge being near the Piney Grove road, and the folding hinge between that and the Fredericksburg road.

Hill's corps, in front of Burnside, evidently was not prepared for the advance. The column of the 9th pushed him back steadily, halting at times to get new foothold, but still pushing till all the rebel lines were driven back to the village. The fighting was not so severe on the left as on the right, but the results were exceedingly gratifying. The rebel lines, which had been in the form of a crescent, were hampered into a horse shoe. It was a glorious movement, that of the 9th. I can only wish that a little extra force had been thrown in. Then the rebel right would have been completely turned, and the whole force put to rout. I do not write it as a criticism, but merely notice it to show how near Burnside came toward giving the finishing stroke. I was glorious as it was. He advanced close to the forks of the road and the cluster of houses which made the town. The rebels tried again and again to recover the ground which they had lost; but all their efforts were in vain. The 9th, which had been tried often and never found wanting, maintained its position through the night.

THE SIXTH CORPS.

Ewell's position in the centre, in front of the 5th and 6th, was very strong. The rebel line of skirmishers were in a belt of woods, behind which, in advantageous positions, were rifle-pits, abatis and earthworks, with several batteries. Gen. Hunt, commanding the artillery of the army, made a thorough inspection of the ground, and brought several batteries into position to rain shells upon the enemy's works as the line advanced. Among the batteries was McCarty's Massachusetts. An officer of a Vermont regiment praised its action in high terms.

The 6th was commanded by Wright after the death of Sedgwick; the first division was commanded by Col. Upton; the second by Wheaton; and the third by Ricketts. In the fourth brigade of Wheaton's division there is the 2d Rhode Island, 7th, 10th, and 37th Massachusetts. The second brigade is of Green Mountain boys, the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th and 5th Vermont regiments.

The line did not have to move far before it came upon the enemy—their old enemy which they had met upon the hill of Gettysburg.

It was past 7 o'clock. There was a few minutes of terrible fighting in fierceness and intensity surpassing that of Friday afternoon at Gettysburg. When the uproar was the wildest there was a cheer—a shout, sharper and louder than the din of arms. It was not the savage cry of the enemy, but a buoyant, thrilling shout. Away they went into the storm over the intervening space, with bayonets firmly set, Vermont leading the charge, plunging into Dale's brigade of Rhode's division, and leading it captive from the field. Ewell poured in his men to cover his works, but the 2d Vermont was in possession and were determined not to give them up. Far in advance of all the line, lay that regiment pouring its fire upon the enemy. They were so far ahead that General Wright feared to have them remain through the night. He was about to withdraw them. "We don't want to go back. Give us rations and ammunition and we will hold it six months," said the soldiers.

Gen. Wright rode to Gen. Grant. "What shall I do?" he asked.

"Pile in the men and hold it," was the reply. Gen. Wright went back, but meanwhile by some means they had been ordered to return.

That charge! It will be forever memorable. Even now I seem to hear that shout, ringing like a trumpet blast above the thunders of the cannonade, and the crashing of fifty thousand muskets. It was Vermont which took a rebel brigade prisoners of war in the last charge of Longstreet at Gettysburg. Then they were on the defensive, and now it is Vermont again on the offensive, cuts out a second brigade. Glorious always and forever!

THE FIFTH CORPS.

I have already spoken of the part which the 5th corps performed in connection with the 2d, in the early part of the afternoon. It was in once more. Robinson's, Cutler's, Crawford's divisions—all were engaged. General Cutler, commanding the 4th division since Gen. Wadsworth's death, was in the thickest of the fight.

While the battle was raging, Gen. Rice, commanding the 2d brigade of the 4th division, was lying in the hospital wounded. The surgeon had laid down his knife after amputating the shattered limb. The sufferer could hear the tide of battle—the constant rolls, like waves upon the shore. His eyes were closing to scenes of earth. He was nearing that land which is without a shore. His pain was intense.

"Turn me over," he said to the surgeon and attendants.

"Which way will you lie?"

"Let me lie with my face toward the enemy."

They were his last words. And with them I close the narrative of the operations of the day—of one of the greatest battles of the war. His face toward the enemy! He and his fellow soldiers met them upon the gory field, thousands of them lying upon the spot that is to be forever their resting place. Let this be the inscription upon the mausoleum erected to their memory—"They fell with their faces toward the enemy!"

NATIVE WINES.—Sacred History abounds in allusions to wine, and as there are thirteen distinct Hebrew terms used in the Bible to distinguish vintages of different kinds, condition and ages, it is evident that the "ancient people" were no less particular in the matter of "brands" than are the people of the present day. The Greek and Romans had two hundred varieties, of which the "Falernian" was the choicest; and the products of particular vineyards were as highly esteemed in Athens and Rome, as the Cliquet and Metternich wines now are in London and Paris. The wines of antiquity were often villainously adulterated. The art of "doctoring" the juice of the grape so far from being a modern invention that it dates back to the siege of Troy. Helen, the fair and frail, is said to have learned the trick in Egypt, and to have practised it for the sake of increasing the exhilarating properties of the wine she gave to the defenders of the city after a hard battle with the Greeks.

The safest and best of all exhilarants is good wine. Many physicians and matrons suppose we must have foreign wine. There is one hundred times the quantity of wines exported from France, Spain and Germany, than can be manufactured there from the quantity of grapes. There is but one safeguard, and that is to use our pure native wines. Imported wines now pay a heavy duty, and a bottle of real Port or Sherry can only be obtained at a high price. There is no duty or tax on native wines—therefore, in the name of purity and economy, let us have our own native wines.

Messrs. Bennett Pieters & Co., of Chicago, always have an assorted stock of fine imported wines in U. S. bonded warehouses, from the most reliable houses of France, Spain and Germany, also brandies, gins, rums, &c.; and have for the past three years been making extensive preparations for the manufacture of home-made wines. They have the most extensive arrangements with fruit, growers, and in the proper season they gather strawberries, cherries, peaches, blackberries, raspberries &c. &c., to an enormous amount. Their strawberry, cherry, blackberry, raspberry and muscat wines far exceed many of the imported wines, both in purity and exhilarating effects. Many of these home-made wines are being largely adulterated, and many a bottle of cherry wine is sold, which never had a drop of cherry juice in it. Buy none but those with the unmistakable label of Bennett Pieters & Co. Those gentlemen are men of high respectability, and guarantee every article from their house, pure and unadulterated. 56my24law

INSURE WITH THE PHOENIX INSURANCE COMPANY, HARTFORD.—Our mode of adjusting losses. Feeling it a special duty I owe to the Phoenix Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., I take great pleasure in expressing my thankfulness for the promptness and liberality they have exhibited in honorably adjusting and paying my claim, for loss sustained by the total destruction of my brick store building and stock of merchandise contained therein in Harrodsburg Ky., a few days since, and upon which I had an insurance in the PHOENIX. I am to-day in receipt of the amount of my claim $9,500 sixty days before the same was due, according to the terms of the policy, which is satisfactory evidence in my mind that the PHOENIX is the Company to do business with. ROCK CO., WISCONSIN, LANDS FOR SALE BY AUCTION.
Will be sold by auction, on Thursday the 23d of June Next, in the city of Janesville, Rock county, Wisconsin, thirty-eight hundred and forty (3840) acres of the finest agricultural lands in the State. They are situated about ten miles from Janesville, and adjoining the village of Footville, with the Beloit & Madison Railroad running through them, and the Milwaukee & Southern Wisconsin Railroad on their border, and are composed of about an equal quantity of heavy "prairie" timber and prairie. They were selected for their present owner for investment, nearly thirty years ago, as the best lands in all respects in Rock county, and this country. It is well known, it is the garden of Wisconsin.
They will be sold in farm parcels, and the purchase money, less twenty per cent, may be paid in cash, or may remain on mortgage at seven per cent. interest, for seven or ten years, excepting timber lots which will be sold for cash.
There will also be sold at the same time and place, and to the same manner, but wholly for cash, twenty two in all (2200) acres of prime lands in Clarion county, near the town of Wausau, selected about eight years ago.
A more eligible opportunity for farmers to secure most desirable farms, or for the investment of capital, could not be offered.
For further particulars apply personally, or by letter to Mr. Dawson, No. 3 East 14th street, Stevens, who will be in Janesville ten days before the sale takes place; to J. R. Pease, Esq., counselor at law, Janesville, or to Mr. John Howe, on the property, at Footville.

CORN FOR FODDER.—Every farmer who keeps cows, who makes hay and has less than he can use to advantage, or who on any account wishes to increase either his summer or winter fodder, ought to sow corn. The most profitable kind of corn for this purpose are the large Southern or Western varieties. The seed is usually soaked and sown rather late in the season, broadcast. It is much better to sow in drills. The land should be in high condition, and a liberal dressing of good stable or other manure is an advantage. Turn light furrows with a one-horse plow, 4 feet apart; scatter the seed, so that about 10 kernels will fall in a foot. This is done very easily and rapidly. Cover with a sharp-toothed harrow, or a narrow turned bottom side up. It is no disadvantage if the seed be scattered considerably. After the corn comes up, cultivate at least twice; and after this, before cutting for curing, go through and pull any large weeds which may have started, as they may impart a bad flavor to the milk when fed to cows.

The crop is not an exhausting one, although a weight of four tons of dried fodder is sometimes taken from an acre. No seed ripens, hence the draft upon the mineral ingredients of the soil is not great. This affords a most excellent green fodder during the heat of August and September, when grass often fails; and when dried, gives an article nearly if not fully equal to good meadow hay, especially as fodder for cows.

ROCK CO., WISCONSIN, LANDS FOR SALE BY AUCTION.—Will be sold by auction, on Thursday the 23rd of June Next, in the city of Jamestown, Rock county, Wisconsin, thirty-eight hundred and forty (3840) acres of the best agricultural land in the State. The land is situated in the town of Madison, and is bounded by the village of Fostville, with the Detroit & Madison Railroad running through them, and the Milwaukee & Southern Wisconsin Railroad on their border and are composed of about an equal quantity of heavy "grove" timber and prairie. They were selected for their present owners for investment, nearly thirty years ago, as the best lands in all respects, in Rock county, and this country is well known, is the garden of Wisconsin.

They will be sold in farm parcels, and the purchase money, less twenty or twenty-five per cent, which may be paid in cash, may remain on mortgage at seven per cent interest, for seven or ten years, excepting timber lots which will be sold for cash.

There will also be sold at the same time and place, and to the same owner, but wholly for cash, twenty-two hundred (2200) acres of prime lands in Marathon county, near the town of Wausau, selected about eight years ago.

A most eligible opportunity for farmers to secure most desirable farms, or for the investment of capital, could not be offered.

For further particulars apply personally, or by letter to Mr. Dawson, No. 9 East 15th street, New York City, who will be in the city ten days before the sale takes place; or to J. R. Pomeroy, Esq., counsel at law, Jamestown, or to Mr. John Howe, on the property, at Fostville.
